A CITY OF THE DEAD

Scenes in the Vast Charnel House at Johnstown.

MAKING BONFIRES OF THE RUINS

Victims in Conemaugh Valley Estimated at Between 8,000 and 14,000.

WILLIAMSPORT'S PITIABLE FLIGHT.

Rescuing Order Out of Chaos—The Ground Will Be Ready for Rebuilding by Monday—Johnstown's Wants Abundantly Supplied, While Starvation Threatens the Unfortunates at Woodvale—Another Long List of Identified Dead—Fever and Pneumonia Claim 2,000 Victims—Pittsburg's Noble Work in Rescuing the Perishing.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., June 5.—Superintendent Morgan, of the Cambria Iron Company, returned from a tour of the entire flooded district. He declared that the death list now numbers now alive when 25,000 lived and had their being before the flood.

Adj. Gen. Hastings maintains that the death list will not exceed 8,000, and of this number he thinks 3,000 bodies will never be recovered.

Mr. McCannagh, the chief of the bureau of registration, said that he is convinced that the number who perished is 10,000 or more.

Purging with Fire.

Capt. W. R. Jones and Evan Jones held a consultation and arranged the scheme for clearing the streets.

"How are you going to do it?" asked the citizens committee. "Men and dynamite," replied Evan Jones. "We are about 2,000 in all. We'll just go up and cast all this truck out on the flats there and let it burn. The wind will scatter the ashes and there won't be anything to remind you of your trouble."

In an hour a hundred tents were up and the men were tearing down the mountains of lumber and logs and piling them ready for the bonfire. Great billows of flames reached up toward the lowering clouds and now the streets are passable to all parts of the city, although the debris is by no means removed, nor will it be for several days. There will be a clear ground next Monday between the rivers upon which Johnstown people may again build and again grow rich and great.

Supplies are Dispensed.

Gen. Hastings has instructed his assistant, Maj. A. L. Spangler, to organize the following departments of distribution: Food and drink, clothing, footwear, fuel, and other necessities.

Spangler has also organized a department, including Kernville, Woodvale, Cambria City, Morrellville, Conemaugh and other towns, and in each of these will be a depot for the distribution of the necessities to the worthy. This scheme will enable those in charge to take care of all who are needy and prevent imposition.

The principal depot is at the Pennsylvania passenger station. A portion of the platform has been wired off and the hotel and restaurant and a half the culinary supplies were captured and shipped on a special train.

some names of the missing, but refuse to give out what they are certain the people have been drowned.

Letting the Bodies Burn.

The hand of providence is in it. The suggestion made by the physicians that the bodies not buried be allowed to be cremated, the interest of public health, and which would save a store of indignation among the surviving population, is viewed with more calmness, as there is a growing sentiment that it is for all the best solution of the problem. Weeks, months will be required to remove the stupendous mass by artificial means, and meantime the rotting, putrefying remains of poor humanity buried there would be leading pollution and death to all the surrounding country. The awful desolation of the place has been described often enough by already to render a repetition of the attempt here unnecessary. These descriptions have been as truthful and graphic as it is possible for man to make them, none have been adequate, none could be.

Five Pounds of Dynamite Powerful.

A five pound can of dynamite was exploded among the wreckage at the second pier of the west end of the stone bridge. Beyond a terrific report it failed to dislodge any of the debris.

Sixty Persons Drowned on a Wrecked Bridge—Much Lumber Lost.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., June 5.—Williamstown is utterly prostrated by the great flood of 1885 is eclipsed. Then the water rose to the height of twenty-eight feet, and this time it was thirty-one feet. From every side came tales of loss of life, suffering and distress. None, however, equal to the story of the disaster which occurred on the Market street bridge, which was swept away by the flood. Fifty or sixty persons, mostly boys, were on the bridge at the time, and in the twinkling of an eye they were swept away to death.

Baiting the Groceries.

The flood having subsided, all the grim desolation is now uncovered. A great many grocery and other stores were gutted by the water, but by the things to eat. There has been considerable anxiety about the banks, owing to the people who are in urgent need, but they will weather the storm, especially if they receive any support from outside.

Born Under Precarious Circumstances.

Several children were born during the flood, some of them among refugees who were clinging to the rafters of a house floating down the river. In a house which had just been delivered of twins. She was rescued while still in bed when living at Fiddlersburg, Pa. Mrs. Platt, also lived in the same house.

The loss at Williamstown and Lock Haven will amount to $3,000,000 or $4,000,000—some say more.

Most of the houses have made advances on this, though such advances are confined to Williamstown. Some of the greatest sawmills are practically destroyed.

Among the persons drowned here was Lizzie Pliege, of Albany, N. Y.

About thirty-six persons were drowned in the Nittany valley.

The Governor's Appeal.

Gov. Beaver has issued an appeal to the people of the United States in which after reciting the appalling facts in regard to the flood in the Conemaugh valley, he says that while the most pressing need for food has been supplied, shoes and clothing are greatly needed, and money and supplies are needed for buying the food, clearing the dangerous debris and caring for the homeless and suffering.

The governor adds that late advice indicate great loss of life and property along the banks of the Conemaugh, Susquehanna, and in localities from which definite information can be obtained. Such facts as have come, however, are appalling and he expects that the details will add new horrors.

The offerings of aid have already been large and widespread, and the governor assures contributors that their gifts will be wisely and promptly distributed.

Governor Beaver to President Harrison.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—The president has received the following from Governor Beaver:

HARRISBURG, Pa., June 3. The President:

Of Cambria county says everything is quiet. Can't control the flood. People fairly housed and good order prevails. Food so far equal to the demand. Supplies of food and clothing still plenty needed. Conemaugh valley greatly encouraged our people. Will communicate with you promptly if anything unusual occurs.

PREDICTIONS OF PESTILENCE.

The horrible results of putrefying flesh that threaten the valley are being predicted by the physicians.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., June 4.—A gang of 300 men was put to work removing the debris around the Cambria iron mill. The workers have been working for several days, but it was muddy and they went back for their overalls, and before they could get away they were carried by the water and drowned. The next morning we found them dead.

Turned Back for Their Overalls.

"Among the passengers were two young ladies, one of whom, I think, lived in Pittsburgh, and the other, who was visiting her in Pittsburgh, lived in New Jersey. They were in the car, and in the parlor car a woman lost her husband and sister, and another lady passenger and her three children were lost. The woman made a desperate effort to save the children, but it was useless, as the odds were so great against her. A woman named Christian, who lived in Mississippi, was lost from one of the cars, and two passengers in the day coach are missing.

Daly's theatrical companies was on one of the trains, but it is not known if any of the members were lost.

It is said that not less than eleven of the people lost from the train were Pittsburghers, but it is impossible to ascertain any names. The railroad company has some names of the missing, but refuse to give out what they are certain the people have been drowned.

There is only one singer alive who can strike high G and hang on to it. That is Miss Sybil Sanderson, the young Californian in Paris. The American trotting horse and the American high G are something new. Neither of them spoke a word. They talked straight up to Robert, and while one of them took hold of him by the neck the other caught him by the legs. Then they carried him away, and all the resistance and
